

A Letter to my Sons:

Son:

A son is that male child most men hope to have in their life. That some one who not only will carry on his name but someone who might be able to do and obtain heights he may have not been able to. Some one he can relate to in the sense that the advice & suggestions he gives him will maybe help over the bumps & disappointments he will have in his life. A person he hopes when he grows up will not only be a son but also a friend. But most of all he hopes he will become a man.

MAN!

A boy doesn't become a man when he reaches a certain age or attain certain abilities or stature. He must develop a few important characteristics. Mostly consideration, responsibility, dependability & honesty. Consideration for other people's feelings & thoughts. The responsibility of maybe marriage and a family to do the best he can for them. Responsibility for his job and willingness to accept the consequences for a wrong decision or action without trying to blame it on someone or something else. Honesty of not only stealing or deception but to be honest with himself & others. Dependable not only with what he says but also to be depended on to do the right thing to his best way of thinking. If I had one wish it would be that all my sons would be considered by others as a MAN.

wrote by a Caring Father (over) who doesn't seem able to convey it to his sons.

P.S. You will probably have many girl friends in your life also a lot of acquaintances but you will have only a couple close friends. These will be a few people you should do everything in your power to help & also to ask for help. But remember there is one person that is eager & anxious to help you at any time. your Father

ADVICE:

Something that can only be offered. You are the one who can accept it or decline it.